He has spent many years incorporating conservation practices into the farm, ranging from building a manure storage facility, developing waterways, practicing no-till, installing buffer strips, building a creek crossing for cattle, and installing fence to keep cattle out of Salt Creek and off its banks.

Bob raises corn, soybeans, wheat, and hay. In addition, he runs a 75 head cow-calf operation. Bob received the Cooperator of the Year Award from the Fairfield Soil and Water Conservation District in 2004 for his conservation practices implemented at Hoffman Farms.

BRADY MILLER RECEIVES COLLEGE SCHOLARSHIP

Brady Miller, son of Karla and Craig Miller, was selected to be one of the 2007 recipients of the Fairfield SWCD $500 college scholarships. Brady lives on Stemen Road in Baltimore. He graduated from Liberty Union High School this past June, and will be attending ATI in Wooster this coming fall. Brady will study Agronomy and Crop Management Services.

Brady was very active in FFA and was the state first place winner in grain production. He also was a long term 4-H member, played varsity football and ran track.

Brady credits his interest in natural resources conservation to his father who frequently took him to the neighbor's farm since he was a very small boy. "I really liked the farm and have been able to visit and work there over the last 15 years which has given me a sincere understanding of the importance of farming," said Brady.

We wish Brady well in his agricultural endeavors!

Brandon Thomas, son of Tim Thomas, was selected to be one of the 2007 recipients of the Fairfield SWCD $500 college scholarships. He lives on Lancaster-New Lexington Road in Bremen.

Brandon credits his interest in natural resource conservation to his family farm and the Ag Ed program at his high school. "At school and at home on the farm, I learned why crop rotations, sod waterways, and saving tillable land are important," said Brandon.

We also wish Brandon well in his agricultural endeavors!

WANTED: Custom Seeders

The Fairfield SWCD is looking for individuals who want to be listed on our custom seeder list. Many times we have customers who do not have the equipment to plant a conservation cover such as cool season or warm season (prairie) grass or a hay/pasture seed mix. These landowners need to hire someone who has the equipment (drill, broadcast seeder, cultipacker) to plant the grass and clover mixes. If you would like to be added to the list, submit your name, address, phone number(s), and the types (prairie, cool season, hay, pasture) of seeding you can plant.

New Wildlife Officer in Fairfield County

State Wildlife Officer Brad St. Clair began active duty in Fairfield County in June, according to the ODNR Division of Wildlife. "I am excited to continue my service to Ohio's sportsmen and women and wildlife enthusiasts in Fairfield County," said St. Clair. He will reside within the county.

Officer St. Clair is originally from Cambridge. He earned an Associates Degree in Fish and Wildlife Management from Hocking College. Before attending the State Wildlife Officer Academy, St. Clair served for six years as a seasonal worker at Salt Fork and Woodbury Wildlife Areas. He comes to our county after serving as a Wildlife Officer in Van Wert County for four years.

Officer St. Clair's duties as a state wildlife officer include wildlife law enforcement tasks along with educational outreach. Other tasks include enforcing Ohio's stream litter law and state criminal laws on property owned or controlled by the Division of Wildlife. St. Clair will also contact many Ohio sportsmen and women in the field, perform fish and wildlife surveys, advise on nuisance wildlife issues, and give presentations on wildlife management, hunter education, trapping, and fishing.

Officer St. Clair replaces Officer Kirk Kiefer who was promoted to an investigator position with the Division of Wildlife. His phone number is (614) 644-3929 ext. 1203.

Andrea Gibson, Student Trainee

Andrea Gibson, a second year student trainee with NRCS, has been working with us this summer. Raised on a grain farm in Clinton County, she will be a senior at Wilmington College this fall, studying agronomy. She actively participates on the soil judging and tennis teams there. When speaking of her experience thus far this summer, Andrea notes, "This has been a great learning experience. Fairfield County is a beautiful area with lots of nice people and a largely diversified agricultural base". She will be here until mid August.

The Building Blocks of Agriculture Conservation

The protection and preservation of agri-business and the farmlands in Fairfield County can be accomplished through many programs. If we look at how each of these programs are meant to be used, we find that they form the most basic of building blocks. From the bottom to the top we find the following:

FOUNDATION Current Agriculture Use Valuation - renewed every year

CAUV protects the farm parcels from “unreasonable” real-estate taxes.

CAUV assures agriculture land is taxed at its agriculture value not at its potential market value. Without this, the farm could quickly crumble under a tax burden. CAUV is administered through the County Auditor.

MORTAR Agriculture Districts - renewed every five years

Ag Districts provide basic protection for an individual farm and help close the gaps and avoid the forces that can easily destroy a farm.

Ag Districts are basic protection from utility assessments, nuisance lawsuits and legal assistance in eminent domain cases. This helps preserve the integrity of the farm and protects it from unexpected costs. This holds the farm together year to year and helps protect the bottom line. Ag Districts are administered through the County Auditor.

WALLS Agriculture Security Areas - renewed every ten years

ASA's provide basic protection of the farming community from the pressure to develop.

Agriculture Security Areas can be the perimeter defense of the farm community. ASA's encourage 500 acre or larger tracts of contiguous land to help keep farming a viable business. Townships and Counties agree to not extend utilities and roads into the ASA for a period of 10 years if they accept the proposal which must comply with the local planning approach. Properly assembled ASA's keep utilities and roads from invading the farming community which helps discourage intense development. Landowners may be eligible for a 10-year tax abatement on new real-property Ag-structures if granted by the County and Township.

ROOF Agriculture Easements – forever

Protection of a farm from intensive non-agricultural uses.

Easements are the culmination of all the above programs with a “forever” factor.

When placed over the farm it is the ultimate protection available for the entire agricultural structure. The landowners release the right to develop or alter the land in any manner that is not consistent with the conservation minded nature of the easement. The Easement grantors are eligible for state and federal income tax charitable deductions.

- Ohio Agriculture Easement Donation Program – Fixed/Predetermined

The landowners release the right to develop or alter the land in any manner that is not consistent with the conservation minded nature of the easement. There is strong government involvement in OAEDP. Tax benefits may apply.

- Land Trusts and Associations - Flexible

Easements can be written or crafted to allow the landowners to allow limited development activities on the farm as long as they are consistent with the conservation minded nature of the easement. There is limited government involvement in incorporated Land Trusts and Associations. Locally the Fairfield Land Preservation Association is still forming and the Licking Land Trust and Hocking Hills Land Trust have been running for years. Tax benefits may apply.

- Clean Ohio Agriculture Easement Purchase Program - Fixed/Predetermined

OAEPP is available to a limited number of farms. The Ohio Department of Agriculture pays qualifying farms much of the difference between agriculture value and full market value of the land. The landowners release the right to develop or alter the land in any manner that is not consistent with the conservation minded nature of the easement. There is strong government involvement in OAEPP. Tax benefits may apply.

For information on any of the above programs, or to specifically discuss farmland preservation opportunities for your land, please contact Jonathan Ferbrache with the Fairfield Soil and Water Conservation District.
